Common

The rapper and actor is performing at this year's Essence Festival (July 2-5)

Excited to head to New Orleans for the fest?
It's an incredible place to go and absorb and really get into the culture of a place that is unique and beautiful.

You take your Best Original Song Oscar with you when you travel, right?
I keep it at home in my front room. It's in a place where I only see it if I want to, so sometimes I look at it like, "Wow, I can't believe this is here in my house."

Your daughter Omoye just graduated. Any advice?
I tell her to know who you are, respect who you are and love who you are.

People UPDATE

Rachel Dolezal Fallout

Since we wrote about Rachel Dolezal in our June 29 issue, the former NAACP activist accused of lying about her race continues to lose jobs and allies. The NAACP, which initially stuck by her, later asked the Spokane police department to actively pursue its hate crime investigation into Dolezal's claim that she was the victim of hate mail in February and May.

SELF-IDENTIFYING On the Today show, Dolezal said she "drew self-portraits with a brown crayon" as a 5-year-old.

After reports surfaced about Dolezal's alleged misconduct as a volunteer for Spokane's Police Ombudsman Commission, she told People, "I will not resign; I have done nothing wrong." A day later she was booted. She was also fired as a freelancer with the Inlander newspaper. "How could we work with someone whose credibility—indeed, her very identity—is now being questioned?" said the editor Jacob H. Fries in a note to readers. However, all may not be lost. Reports are now circulating that Dolezal may reappear as the star of her own reality show.

BRITNEY SPEARS & CHARLIE EBERSOL

WHAT WENT WRONG

BY MELODY CHIU

EVEN AS SHE GUSHED about her "adorable, thoughtful and sweet" boyfriend Charlie Ebersol three months ago, Britney Spears seemed wary of what the romantic future would hold. "I have no idea what it takes," she told People in March of finding lasting love. "I don't really understand love. As far as my kids go, it's just unconditional, and that's something that's really hard to find."

"No one is that surprised because of the way things were going recently," an Ebersol source says of the couple, who split earlier this month.

Indeed, a fairy-tale ending wasn't in the cards for Spears, 33, and Ebersol, 32: The couple of eight months decided to go their separate ways, multiple sources confirm. "They are two busy people leading two very busy lives," says a source close to them. "They both decided they would focus on other priorities." Adds an Ebersol source: "There isn't any real drama. They just broke up."

Introduced by Spears's assistant last year, the couple—last seen together → publicly in May at the Billboard Music Awards—quickly became inseparable, celebrating birthdays and holidays together, which they documented on social media (she's since deleted all photos with Ebersol from her Instagram account). The producer also shared a tight bond with her sons (with ex Kevin Federline) Sean Preston, 9, and Jayden James, 8, and "everyone thought he might end up asking her to marry him because it was that serious," says the Ebersol source. But in the last few months, the relationship "just faded away," says the source. "It was obvious to everyone that [a split] was going to happen, even to them."

'THERE ISN'T ANY REAL DRAMA. . . . THIS ISN'T AN UGLY BREAKUP AT ALL. THEY'LL BOTH BE OKAY' —AN EBERSOL SOURCE

The "Pretty Girls" singer, who has been married twice and called off an engagement to agent Jason Trawick in 2013, is staying upbeat in the wake of her split, spending time back home in Louisiana ("So nice to be home! Nothing like Louisiana boys," she captioned a photo on Instagram of her and an unidentified guy). Says the Ebersol source: "This isn't an ugly breakup at all. They'll both be okay."

—REPORTING BY ELIZABETH LEONARD and STEVE HELLING

HAPPIER TIMES: At the Life Ball in Austria on May 16 (above) and with Jackson in April at an L.A. charity event (right).

CHARLIZE THERON & SEAN PENN

INSIDE THEIR SURPRISING SPLIT

Embracing on the Cannes red carpet in May, Charlize Theron and Sean Penn appeared to be the picture-perfect couple. "Things seemed loving between them," says a source who spent time with the Academy Award winners at the French film festival. But just a month later, Theron, 39, and Penn, 54, called it quits, leaving some of those around them "absolutely surprised."

Friends for years, the actors became romantically involved in late 2013. Their shared temperaments—they're both "passionate" people, says a Theron pal—"seemed to bring them closer."

But that passion showed its downside last fall while Penn was directing Theron in the upcoming film The Last Face. "Sean was very intense," according to the pal. (Reps for the actors had no comment.)

Despite the drama, those who knew the couple saw a bright future for Penn and Theron. Both were quoted in recent interviews calling each other "the love of my life," and the Theron pal says the Mad Max star had hopes that Penn and her son Jackson could become "family." "It looked like a wedding was imminent," says an industry insider. "Everything seemed in sync."

ANGELINA & SHILOH

INSIDE THEIR EMOTIONAL TRIP

IT WAS A MOTHER-DAUGHTER EXPERIENCE neither will forget. Last week Angelina Jolie Pitt and her daughter Shiloh, 9, traveled to Lebanon and Turkey to meet with Syrian and Iraqi refugees for World Refugee Day to honor the 60 million displaced people around the globe. "Shiloh is very aware that I hold refugee families in high regard and has been asking to come on missions and meet them for many years," Jolie Pitt, 40, tells People. "This is a visit that brought home just how hard it is to live in displacement. It was humbling and emotional." —MARY GREEN

LESTER HOLT & BRIAN WILLIAMS
Nightly News Switch-Up

While Lester Holt's promotion to NBC Nightly News anchor was a welcome surprise, the reason for the open position —Brian Williams's suspension and move to MSNBC following his admission to embellishing past stories—made the opportunity bittersweet. "This is not the way I would have wanted to end up in a job like this," the 56-year-old journalist tells People. "But at the same time I'm honored, and I'm going to savor it." Holt, a longtime veteran of the network, says he's still surprised at the turn of events: "Trust me when I tell you I was not thinking of becoming the anchor of the NBC Nightly News. It was not in the cards." But as the first solo African-American anchor of a weekday nightly network newscast, the husband and father of two is making history. "You never know when doors will open," says Holt. "This one did, and I said, 'Wow, I'm ready!'"

CATCHING UP WITH LAUREN GRAHAM

THE ACTRESS, 48, STARS IN THE FAMILY FILM MAX, IN THEATERS NOW

Max is about a military service dog. Do you enjoy working with animals?

I liked that the dogs that worked on the film were rescues. One of the trainers also worked with me on Evan Almighty, so he goes from elephants to dogs!

What's life like since _Parenthood_ ended?

My sister is getting married, so there's stuff to do with that. I'm also working on this book [a follow-up to her 2014 novel Someday, Someday, Maybe]. And I'm doing stuff with my boyfriend [Peter Krause] and his 13-year-old son [Roman]. It's really fun to be able to be around more.

Aside from Peter, do you still see your _Parenthood_ costars?

I made friendships on that show that will be with me a lifetime. I see Mae [Whitman] and Miles [Heizer] as much as, if not more than, when we were working together.

Irritable Bowel Syndrome with Constipation (IBS-C)

Proactively manage your recurring symptoms with LINZESS®

Do you keep taking laxatives, but can't get your symptoms to stay away? You may have more than just occasional constipation. It's time to talk to your doctor about your belly pain and constipation. Then ask about LINZESS, a once-daily capsule that's approved to help adults manage symptoms of IBS with Constipation. LINZESS works differently from laxatives. It is thought to work in two ways: by helping to calm pain-sensing nerves*, and by accelerating bowel movements. LINZESS may relieve your belly pain and let you have more frequent and complete bowel movements that are easier to pass.

Bottom line, if your IBS-C symptoms keep coming back, ask your doctor about LINZESS today.

*This was seen in animal studies and the relevance to humans is not known.

Who is LINZESS for?

Prescription LINZESS® (linaclotide) is for adults with IBS-C.
It is not known if LINZESS is safe and effective in children.

IMPORTANT RISK INFORMATION

- Do not give LINZESS to children who are under 6 years of age. It may harm them.
- You should not give LINZESS to children 6 to 17 years of age. It may harm them.
- Do not take LINZESS if a doctor has told you that you have a bowel blockage (intestinal obstruction).

Before you take LINZESS, tell your doctor:

- If you have any other medical conditions.
- If you are pregnant or plan to become pregnant. It is not known if LINZESS will harm your unborn baby.
- If you are breastfeeding or plan to breastfeed. It is not known if LINZESS passes into your breast milk.
- About all the medicines you take, including prescription and non-prescription medicines, vitamins, and herbal supplements.

Side Effects

LINZESS can cause serious side effects, including diarrhea, the most common side effect, which can sometimes be severe. Diarrhea often begins within the first 2 weeks of LINZESS treatment. Stop taking LINZESS and call your doctor right away if you get severe diarrhea during treatment with LINZESS.

Other common side effects of LINZESS include gas, stomach-area (abdominal) pain, swelling, or a feeling of fullness or pressure in your abdomen (distension). Tell your doctor if you have any side effect that bothers you or that does not go away. These are not all the possible side effects of LINZESS. For more information, ask your doctor or pharmacist.

In addition, call your doctor or go to the nearest hospital emergency room right away if you develop unusual or severe stomach-area (abdominal) pain, especially if you also have bright red, bloody stools or black stools that look like tar.

Learn about our money-saving offer at LINZESS.com.

Please see brief summary of Medication Guide on the next page.

You are encouraged to report negative side effects of prescription drugs to the FDA. Visit www.FDA.gov/medwatch or call 1-800-FDA-1088.

3 CONFESSIONS OF TAYLOR SCHILLING

THE STAR OF ORANGE IS THE NEW BLACK AND THE SWINGER COMEDY THE OVERNIGHT TALKS WILD NIGHTS, BEING A WINE NOVICE AND HER FAMILY'S REACTION TO NUDITY

Like her character in The Overnight, she's had a few wild nights of partying.

"I've ended up in different states, not really knowing how it happened," says Schilling. "Let's be honest, it was only like New York to New Jersey—a hop, skip and a jump…I don't know how much I want to tell, to be honest!"

She likes wine but cheats her way to being a connoisseur.

"I don't know anything about wine. I go for the cartoon label. Sometimes I call someone who knows something and send a picture of the bottle from the wine shop on my phone and ask, 'Is this okay?' What I usually do, though, is I attach myself to friends who know about wine and follow their lead."

Her family has found the perfect way of coping with her onscreen nudity.

"We don't talk about it," she says, laughing. "It just never seems to get brought up. My family watches Orange, and they're awesome. They've grown with Piper."

MARIAH CAREY DATING A BILLIONAIRE

STROLLING HAND IN HAND ON THE ISLAND OF CAPRI ON JUNE 19, Mariah Carey and Australian businessman James Packer "were really enjoying the moment," says an onlooker. The singer, 46, and the billionaire, 47, brought their kids—including Carey's 4-year-old twins Monroe and Moroccan—with them on the getaway and are "enjoying each other's company," says a Carey source. Packer, who is the first man Carey has stepped out with since she and ex Nick Cannon split last year, is "happy" about the new relationship, says a source. "It's been bubbling for a couple months." —MELODY CHIU

PHYLLIS SMITH Summer's Scene-stealer!

"I'm nothing special—believe me," insists Smith, who rose to recognition as passive-aggressive paper pusher Phyllis Lapin-Vance on NBC's The Office. Despite her humility, the actress shines among an A-list cast as the voice of Sadness in Inside Out. With her fame on the rise, she credits her hometown of St. Louis, where she still lives, with "keeping me who I am: a normal person." —JEFF NELSON with Scott Huver

"She's very likable and cute," says Smith of Sadness (with Amy Poehler's Joy).

Shock After Shark Attacks

Despite 2 recent incidents in North Carolina, an expert says not to be afraid of swimming in the ocean

As summer heats up, families are flocking to the beach. But fun in the sun turned into a nightmare on June 14, when Kiersten Yow, 12, and Hunter Treschl, 16, were both attacked by sharks just 90 minutes apart in Oak Island, N.C. Talking on-camera from his hospital bed at New Hanover Regional Medical Center, Treschl, who lost his arm below the shoulder, said he will "try to fight and live a normal life." Meanwhile Yow, who lost her arm below her elbow, has been posting optimistic updates on Facebook from the North Carolina Children's Hospital. (Both have started GoFundMe pages for their ongoing medical care.) And one expert insists there's no cause for panic. "Sharks have millions of contact hours near humans every year," Larry Cahoon, professor of biology and marine biology at UNC Wilmington, tells People. "Yet attacks are really rare."

'We're Not a Perfect Family'

The Duggar sisters reenter the spotlight

A month after the world learned that Josh Duggar, 27, molested five girls as a teen, his two sisters—who were both victims—made their first public appearance at the ALIVE Christian Music Festival in Mineral City, Ohio. Jill Dillard, 24, and Jessa Seewald, 22, spoke about faith and marriage but glossed over the scandal that has put their 19 Kids & Counting empire at risk. "Hey, we're not a perfect family, we mess up," Jill told the crowd. Josh's absence was certainly felt: The former conservative lobbyist was scheduled to attend the event with his pregnant wife, Anna, but canceled.

PERSONAL STORIES ABOUT GIVING BACK

Kristy McNichol

The former child star gives a rare interview about her passion for supporting school music programs

McNichol (center) with the choir on April 15, 2015.

I enrolled in the Los Angeles Valley College music program four years ago because I wanted to sing with a choir. The students come from all walks of life, and many are under financial pressure. The choir director, Glenn Carlos, brings them together to sing and also teaches them self-respect. Music can help keep kids out of trouble and make them feel they belong. Music can remind them not to take the wrong path and to keep coming back to school. Music can make such a difference. I want people to know about the LAVC Foundation, which raises money for scholarships, for instruments for students who can't afford them, for sheet music, even dresses if someone can't buy one for a concert appearance. When I was their age, I didn't go to a regular school. I was working, and I had a tutor. Now I'm one of the older ones in class, trying to help the younger ones. The greatest thing is that they don't know who I am at all. I love that. I live a private life, but I want to use my voice in a positive way and to help them stay focused and find their passion. —REPORTED BY LIZ McNEIL

A DOZEN COOL THINGS TO SEE, HEAR, READ AND DOWNLOAD THIS WEEK

Garrett Clayton (center) dancing up a sandstorm.

FRANCISCO ROMAN/DISNEY CHANNEL

No. 1 Teen Beach 2

With plenty of sunshine, comedy and songs, this sequel is a shore bet for young viewers

TV MUSICAL The 2013 ratings smash, a summery fantasy about two kids transported into a 1960s beach-party movie called Wet Side Story, returns with a sequel that simply reverses the story—tide out, tide in. This time Tanner and Lela, the Frankie and Annette equivalents in the old movie, find themselves and their celluloid souls thrust into a real high school. It's like The Purple Rose of Cairo but with surfing, cafeteria-seating angst and musical numbers that give off an easy, phosphorescent sparkle. Garrett Clayton is very funny as Tanner, the boy with magically styled hair—it's impervious to water—and a limited understanding of life. Told that he shouldn't break into yet another song, he asks, "Not even if it's from the heart and moves the story along?" (Disney, June 26, 8 p.m.)

No. 2 Another Period

TV COMEDY Shot reality-style, this Downton Abbey parody isn't subtle—new maid Christina Hendricks is given the professional name "Chair" by her employers, the stupid, moneyed Bellacourts—but after five seasons of Lady Violet's drily unfunny witticisms, this feels like something of a relief. (Comedy Central, Tuesdays, 10:30 p.m.)

Christina Hendricks and Michael Ian Black.

Cry all you want, Bella Thorne—just don't turn around!

No. 3 Scream

MTV turns the slasher classic into a weekly shriek fest

TV HORROR The movie franchise, which kicked off in 1996 with poor Drew Barrymore being stabbed until she looked like a paper lantern, makes a slick, suspenseful transition to series TV. A teen is murdered (shortly after having a severed head lobbed in her direction), raising local fears about a serial killer. What's missing is the original movies' playfulness—the sense that being terrified and being punked are one and the same. (MTV, June 30, 10 p.m.)

No. 4 Miguel, Wildheart

MUSIC R&B As on his 2012 breakout, Kaleidoscope Dream, Miguel pairs soulful vocals with a trippy rock-infused production. Whether he's crooning about carnal desire ("The Valley" and "Flesh" are fit for any bedroom playlist), finding comfort in love ("Coffee" and "Face the Sun") or stumbling upon self-acceptance—"What's Normal Anyway" details his identity crisis growing up biracial and in between homes—Miguel has delivered a very personal work that's also wildly heartfelt. (June 29)

Miguel's third album was inspired by his hometown, L.A.

Calloway with fellow student (and cutie) Oscar.

No. 5 Caroline Calloway

INSTAGRAM An American student at England's Cambridge University, Calloway has turned her life there into an Instagram memoir: Charming photos and text passages document crushes and dorm days. It's sweetly genteel, like a CW series by way of Merchant Ivory. (@carolinecalloway)

No. 6 Seinfeld

HULU

COMEDY In addition to being the greatest sitcom in network history, NBC's Seinfeld was a viral sensation in the days before the Internet fully took charge of our culture and lives. Week after week, over nine seasons, Seinfeld introduced conceptual jokes and catchphrases that were enthusiastically buzzed about (or, as the ancients used to say, "repeated ad nauseam") until they became what are now called "memes." "Sponge-worthy," "Art Vandelay," "Festivus," "urban sombrero," "shrinkage"—and on and on. At some point in the next century, Seinfeld may finally become irrelevant, but don't bet on it. (Launching June 24)

No. 7 Beck, 'Dreams'

MUSIC

ALT-ROCK Hot off winning a Grammy for the album Morning Phase, Beck swaps slow-churning folk for funky guitars—and tambourine!—on this dancey new single. The glide of his falsetto and the woozy throwback vibe make spontaneous head bobbing perfectly acceptable—expected, even.

Beck's new song is groovy, not snoozy.

We got a robot maid! Gemma Chan as a state-of-the-art android.

No. 8 Humans

Androids love work—but do they hate you?

TV

DRAMA It's virtually inevitable that artificial intelligence, in its multiple forms, will someday get its own Facebook page, and that it will refuse to "friend" any people. This enjoyable series sticks to the more familiar, sinister themes of techopolypse. A frantic English suburban husband hires a "synth," a perfected android designed to be nanny and housekeeper, but the sinuously beautiful Anita (Gemma Chan) has a stealthy way of turning up in a room that freaks out the missus. Does Anita have more consciousness than a robot should? The paranoid tension escalates from there. (AMC, June 28, 9 p.m.)

The musical genius in her heyday.

CLOCKWISE FROM TOP LEFT: AL WERTHEIMER/NETFLIX; PAUL SAKUMA/MAKE-A-WISH FOUNDATION/WARNER BROS; RICHARD SAKER/CONTOUR BY GETTY IMAGES

No. 9 What Happened, Miss Simone?

NETFLIX DOCUMENTARY There's too much Nina Simone to wrap one's mind around. The late singer and civil rights activist was too big a presence, her fingers flying over piano keys, voice swelling with emotion. But What Happened takes a worthy shot, with rich tales from Simone intimates about her rocky marriage, her artistic frustration (she wanted to be known as a classical pianist) and her mental illness. If you weren't a fan before, you will be. (June 24)

No. 10 Kacey Musgraves, Pageant Material

Twang with a modern edge

MUSIC COUNTRY Musgraves's 2013 "Follow Your Arrow"—a sorry/not sorry single about smoking weed and girls who kiss girls—pushed the boundaries of traditional country fare and earned the then 24-year-old Nashville newcomer It Girl status. Her new Material displays the same twangy, humorous sass. Accompanied by plucky acoustic strings and steel guitar, she speaks her mind about everything from altered states ("I'm always higher than my hair," she lets you know on the album's title track) to the trade-offs of family ("They give you your first beer," but they "own too much wicker"). Somebody find a tiara: Country has an edgy new queen.

Mayor Ed Lee, Scott and Johnston make one heck of a wish.

No. 11 Batkid Begins

MOVIE DOCUMENTARY This is a story about kindness going viral. Miles Scott, then 5 and in remission from leukemia, didn't expect all of San Francisco to help him live his dream of being Batman for a day. But they did, and the world sure seemed a little nicer. Batkid explains how the vast project came to be, and it's considerably charming for a movie about logistics. Hint: It helps to have certified Nicest Guy Ever Eric Johnston play Batman alongside a cutie like Miles. (June 26, PG)

No. 12 Summer's Best Beach Books

They're smart, they're fun, they go well with sand and sun EDITED BY KIM HUBBARD

Paula McLain
Circling the Sun
Reimagining historical women's lives is all the rage these days, and no one does it better than McLain (The Paris Wife). This time she takes on '20s aviator Beryl Markham—turbulent love life, unstoppable ambition and all. (July)

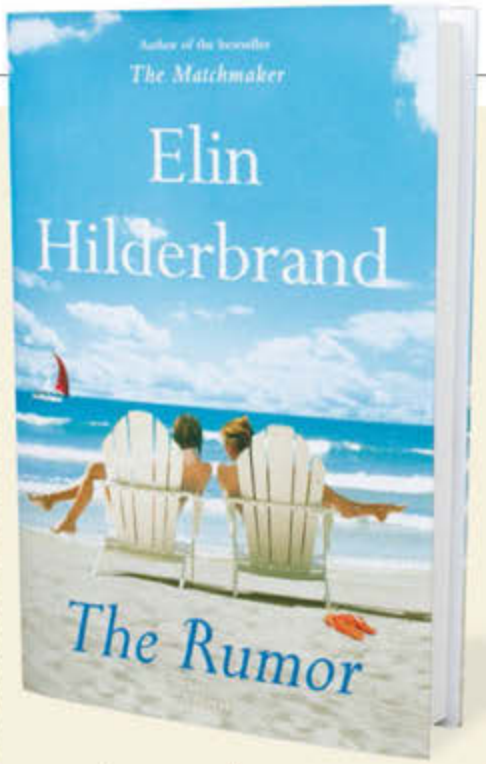
Judd Apatow
Sick in the Head
This collection of interviews with comics makes the perfect beach companion: Dip in for an amusing anecdote (Paul Rudd was initially "too fat" for The 40-Year-Old Virgin), then take a dip in the sea. Only intermittent concentration required. (June)

Christina McDowell
After Perfect
When her adored father (who had ties to Wolf of Wall Street Jordan Belfort) was jailed for fraud, the author lost the opulent life she'd grown up with and had to face dark truths. A searing memoir of loss and redemption. (June)

Elizabeth Adler
One Way or Another
A yacht trip turns dangerous when beautiful Angie Morse is bashed with a champagne bottle and pushed overboard. Who would want her dead, and why? Adler's thriller will have you on the edge of your folding chair. (July)

Philippa Gregory
The Taming of the Queen
Who's ever heard of Kateryn Parr? Henry VIII's sixth wife was smart, independent—and managed to outlive him. In historical-fiction-queen Gregory's latest, she's unforgettable. (August)

Brenda Bowen
Enchanted August
In a rented seaside cottage in Maine, four women recharge, regroup and eat plenty of lobster far away from their pressure-filled lives. A charming, thoroughly engrossing novel that's the next best thing to being there. (June)



Elin Hilderbrand
The Rumor
It wouldn't be summer without a breezy, sensual Nantucket tale from Hilderbrand, and her latest—about two families and some damaging gossip—doesn't disappoint. Intricately plotted and filled with fast-paced dialogue, it's as sweetly satisfying as a glass of Sancerre. (June)

Hilary Liftin
Movie Star by Lizzie Pepper
Liftin, who's cowritten memoirs with celebs including Tori Spelling, presents her first novel as a tell-all by a star she calls Lizzie Pepper. Married young to an actor involved in a cultlike religion, Lizzie ends up leaving him and… Sound like someone we know? Liftin's not saying, but her book is dishy fun. (July)

The People INTERVIEW

WITH A SIZZLING CAREER (AND A BODY TO MATCH), THE MAGIC MIKE XXL STAR SAYS LIFE WITH HIS WIFE AND DAUGHTER MAKES SUCCESS THAT MUCH SWEETER: 'I'VE HAD WAY MORE LUCK THAN MOST PEOPLE DESERVE'

BY JENNIFER GARCIA

NINO MUNOZ/GC

"You can make it and unmake it very quickly in this business," says Tatum.

What is Channing Tatum's proudest moment? No, it's not achieving perfect abs. Not being the kind of next-generation movie star who's equally at home in comedies, dramas, action movies and the L.A. Pride Parade. Not even becoming almost certainly the first A-lister to cheerfully admit to his past as an actual stripper and turn it into box office gold. "I'm not saying I'm not proud of what I've done," says Tatum, 35. But his proudest moment "was watching my wife do something brilliant like birthing a child. Whatever she's done puts my own life into perspective. I would never be able to come close to [carrying] a child. I would tap out in our first week. Men are not capable of withstanding it!"

Juggling his red-hot career with his prized roles as husband and dad—to Jenna Dewan-Tatum, 34, and their daughter Everly, 2—means Tatum's life these days is blissful chaos. "None of this is easy, but at the same time it's everything I would have ever wanted," says the star and coproducer of the over-the-top new sequel Magic Mike XXL as he kicks back on a cozy couch at the London West Hollywood. "Having a family and a little girl, it really makes things superclear," he says. When he thinks about a project, the first question he asks himself is always the same: "Is this worth taking time away from them?" That's not the only big change for a guy who was never a morning person. "The first thing I do when I wake up in the morning? I check to see if my daughter is still sleeping," he says with a laugh.

His Rise to Fame

1. Young Tatum went on to earn a football scholarship. 2. Blue Steel! As a model in 2003. 3. In a Mountain Dew commercial in 2002. 4. He met wife Jenna filming Step Up in 2006. 5. He stepped into producing on 21 Jump Street (with Jonah Hill). 6. "There was way more pressure on the first film," he says of 2012's Magic Mike.

It's a testament to Tatum's charm that he can imbue even a stripper movie with a vibe of sweet sincerity. A 115-min. celebration of chiseled torsos, pelvic thrusts and down-and-dirty dancing, Magic Mike XXL (out July 1) was also the ultimate bonding experience for its cast, all vocal about their devotion to Tatum. Says costar Jada Pinkett Smith: "He's so wonderful at flowing power to all those who are around him. In this movie he really wanted everyone to shine." Adds Kevin Nash, who plays veteran stripper Tarzan: "I would die for him."

'SHE'S GONNA SEE IT; THERE'S NO WAY I COULD SHELTER HER FROM IT. I'M SETTING ASIDE MONEY FOR COLLEGE AND FOR THERAPY'
—On his daughter eventually seeing the Magic Mike movies

The first Magic Mike—made for $7 million, it became a $160 million worldwide hit in 2012—was based on Tatum's youthful experience as a stripper. He started at age 19 to make money ($150 on a good night, he has said) after dropping out of the University of South Florida. But "it's a character I play," he explains. "It's not me. And you do not want to see me do a strip show right now," he adds playfully. It took four months of subsisting on "a lot of chicken and broccoli" to maintain that fat-free torso, and at the end of filming "Channing set up this free-for-all buffet that had everyone's favorite cheat food," says Matt Bomer. Tatum says he went straight for "Domino's pizza, Cheetos and beer. And chewy SweeTarts. I had so much that night I made myself sick."

Born in Alabama to parents Glenn, who worked in construction, and Kay, an airline worker, Tatum got a start on those six-pack abs early on, running track and playing soccer, baseball and football after the family moved to Mississippi. He struggled with ADHD and dyslexia, but earned a starring spot on his Tampa high school football team and later a scholarship to college, though he never finished. After modeling and appearing as a dancer in Ricky Martin's "She Bangs" music video, Tatum got his true start in the business by "faking my way through a deejay audition for a Pepsi commercial," he recalls. "I was playing the lottery left and right," he says. "I just accidentally kept running into a winning ticket." Another big win came in 2006, when he was cast in the hit dance franchise Step Up alongside Jenna. They fell in love and wed in 2009 and now share a home in the L.A. area. "We're a good support system for each other," he says. "We keep pushing each other to grow and be better. I don't think I could do it any other way [than with her]."

Tatum put in hard work to earn commercial success with the G.I. Joe films and 21 and 22 Jump Street, along with critical acclaim in last year's Foxcatcher, but he understands the odds he has overcome. "I've had way more luck than most people deserve," he says. "I'm just the luckiest guy." So what happens in 15 years, when Everly wants to see what all the Magic Mike fuss was about—or asks her dad just how he knew so much about male entertainers? "She's gonna see it; there's no way I could shelter her from it. I'm setting aside money for college and for therapy," Tatum jokes. "But you know, I can't change the fact that I did this in real life. I'm not ashamed of anything I've ever done. I think we teach better through our behavior and by our experiences rather than trying to design some lesson."

Tatum wouldn't mind getting more time to spend with his family. "I wish I could slow down slightly," he says. "But I can't not live in the moment." He's already plotting his next moves: producing and starring in the superhero movie Gambit, for one thing, and eventually stepping behind the camera. "I'm always going to be an actor for hire," he says. "But the next step is a very slow learning process of directing." Meanwhile, he'll cherish those little moments that make him smile—like playing with sidewalk chalk with his wife and daughter. "We'll sit there for hours and just doodle," he says. "We're doing it together, and there is no pressure other than to just enjoy it." ●

Making the Magic

KEVIN NASH
At 55, "I could be everybody's father," jokes the former pro wrestler, who plays grizzled Tarzan. "But it's flattering to be asked to come back."

JADA PINKETT SMITH
The film was "a way in which men and women could share this sensual, erotic space," says Smith, 43, who plays Rome, the impresario of an exotic entertainment palace.

DONALD GLOVER
"I'm from Atlanta, I was born in a strip club," says Glover, 31, who joins the cast as Andre, one of Rome's dancers. "You go to strip clubs after graduation!"

Ab-tastic! The stars get ready to rock everyone's world.

STEPHEN 'TWITCH' BOSS

"There are so many videos of male entertainers on YouTube that they made me watch," says the So You Think You Can Dance alum, 32, of prepping to join the cast. "I watched more than I'd like to say!"

ADAM RODRIGUEZ

"I had stripped down to almost nothing before, so I knew I wasn't going to die or be shamed into oblivion," says Rodriguez, 40, back as easygoing Tito. "You have your brothers around you."

AMBER HEARD

Heard, 29, who plays a photographer who flirts with Tatum's Mike, says she liked that the movie was "not afraid to take risks and challenge gender norms and stereotypes."

MATT BOMER

Sweet stripper Ken has an incredible bod—but Bomer, 37, says if he kept up the diet he'd be "the most miserable, horrific, grumpy human ever."

ANDIE MACDOWELL

"It's okay for women to look at men. I mean, guys have been doing this to us forever!" says the actress, 57, who plays an uninhibited Southern divorcée.

CHANNING TATUM

"We were kind of naive making the first film," says the star and coproducer. "Ignorance is bliss. I don't think anyone anticipated what would happen!"

JOE MANGANIELLO

Back as Richie, the chiseled star, 38, has one of the film's most memorable moments—an impromptu striptease in a mini-mart. "The pressure was up," he says of the scene, which he knew had the "potential to be epic." Fiancée Sofia Vergara, 42, "was always covering herself in the sheets or running" when he tried to rehearse, he jokes. "She's like, 'No! Get away!'" But she won his heart. "I knew I was going to propose to her," he says. "I was planning it while we were filming."

'I Got Lost in the Moment'

A SEXUAL TRYST WITH ONE OF HER SUITORS LED TO A BACKLASH, BUT THIS FREE SPIRIT DOESN'T WANT TO DWELL ON THE PAST BY AILI NAHAS

Feisty, tattooed and opinionated, Kaitlyn Bristowe broke the conventional Bachelorette mold when she admitted to having sex with contestant Nick Viall on their first one-on-one date, even as she was developing strong feelings for other suitors. And the outspoken Canadian, 30, who admits that "living in the moment" can get her into trouble, says the impulsive TV hookup—and subsequent fallout—led to some real-life soul-searching. "I don't regret the action," says Bristowe. "But I regretted it in the sense that I could hurt somebody's feelings. I felt guilty. This isn't my character to jump from one guy to the next."

Are you surprised by the amount of attention your sex life has gotten?
I'm still wondering why this is such a shock to people or why it's a big deal! I was aware of what I was doing. It's a world people don't understand.

A lot of the guys were threatened when Nick joined the show a few weeks after filming began. But there was clearly a big attraction there.
Our connection was stronger than I thought it was going to be. It was definitely a thing. It felt natural too. I lost myself while I was with him. Par for the course!

You were the one who suggested going back to your room. Did you know what was going to happen?
Well, I definitely wasn't thinking that's where it was going to go. That was not my main thought. In that world all you want is more time. Any time you can get is a big deal.

'I live in the moment. This time it obviously got me into a bit of trouble' —KAITLYN BRISTOWE

At any point were you thinking of the other guys?
It's hard because, yes, I was, but I was trying to compartmentalize relationships. When I'm with Nick, this is my relationship with Nick. I do worry about the others, but at the same time I need to focus on the relationship I'm in at that moment.

At any point did you feel like you should stop?
I was going with my heart. I was doing what I would do in a normal relationship. It's hard for me because I do very much live in the moment. Sometimes it's a good thing, and sometimes it's a bad thing, and this time it obviously got me into a bit of trouble. I was feeling one way in the moment, but afterward I was worried about jeopardizing other relationships. That was really hard.

Nick told the whole world that he had sex with Andi Dorfman on her season of The Bachelorette. Did you question his decision to reveal that?
It's pretty clear I'm honest and I'm an open book. So when he did that, I got where he was coming from, because that's probably something I would say. Sometimes being too honest can offend other people. But it was obviously a concern of mine [that he would tell the other guys]. If it was going to be discussed, I wanted to be the one to tell them.

You were clearly emotional the morning after.
I was upset, thinking, "What if I just ruined another relationship that meant something to me?" That's what

No Stranger to Scandal

As the runner-up on Andi Dorfman's season of The Bachelorette, Nick Viall quickly lost his reputation as a cute charmer when he revealed on After the Final Rose that the pair had slept together in the Fantasy Suite. When Bristowe, with whom Viall had sparked up a flirty friendship over Twitter (they'd never met in person), became the new Bachelorette, he asked to join the season already in progress. A giddy Bristowe accepted, to the dismay of Viall's fellow contestants, who criticized the 34-year-old software sales executive for pursuing a "16th minute" of fame. Still, "we had a connection," admits Bristowe. "We both knew it was there."

"I didn't think it would be this hard," says Bristowe. "I didn't know I could feel so strongly."

What Will Shawn Think?

Before her fateful date with Nick, Kaitlyn told personal trainer Shawn Booth that she was falling for him. "Our connection was a powerful thing," she says. "That's where I felt the most regret. A part of me thought, 'Did I just cheat on somebody?'" Still, Kaitlyn says she wanted to give each guy an equal shot. "There was nothing missing from Shawn," she says. "But I was still getting to know him. I was honest [when I opened up], but that probably set him up for heartbreak because he wouldn't understand why I was [pursuing other guys] if I already told him how I felt."

made me cry and broke my heart. I have a crazy connection [with one guy], but now I'm going to go to this other relationship, and maybe I go too far, and then how does the other person feel? Even being the Bachelorette, it still felt wrong. I have a heart, and it hurts me to hurt somebody else.

Did you want to tell the guys right away?

I'm an honest person, so I did want to [tell them] this is what happened and this went too far. Even though it was a moment between [Nick] and me, I felt like everybody had a right to know. What if I'm engaged to someone, and they find out what happened and I wasn't honest?

How do you feel about it all now?

I don't feel like I'm a cheesy person, but I'm cheesy in the sense that I believe everything happens for a reason. So if that's what I had to go through—that's just what I had to go through. It can be difficult to get to happiness, and I am happy, so it was all worth it. ●

Booth scored Bristowe's First Impression rose.

CHARLOTTE AND GWENYTH GRAY

'Saving Our Girls'

GORDON AND KRISTEN GRAY ARE RACING TO FIND A CURE FOR THEIR DAUGHTERS' DEADLY AND RARE BRAIN DISEASE BEFORE IT'S TOO LATE

Each day Hollywood movie producer Gordon Gray and his wife, Kristen, watch their daughter Charlotte slip a little further away. The once-fearless and outgoing 4-year-old now struggles to put her sentences together and fearfully shies away from activities she once loved. At a recent school recital, she even forgot the words to a favorite song. "That killed me," says Gordon, 50, who has worked on films like The Rookie and Invincible. "I had to run out. I couldn't take it."

Charlotte's regression is the result of a form of Batten disease—an extremely rare neurodegenerative disorder that's expected to render her blind, immobile and unable to communicate and eventually kill her before the age of 12. Her sister, 23-month-old Gwenyth, was diagnosed with the same disorder last spring, shortly after Charlotte. It was "a double dose of devastation," says Kristen, 39. But the Grays quickly rallied. After discovering there is no cure and little funding for research into the rare genetic disease, the Grays launched the Charlotte and Gwenyth Gray Foundation (curebatten.org) and a huge social media campaign—with the hopes of raising the $10 to $12 million needed to find a cure.

Selma Blair and Angie Harmon attended a June 20 fundraiser while Rihanna, Jennifer Lawrence and Gwyneth Paltrow offered support online.

"We're going to save our girls," Gordon says. "That's our job."

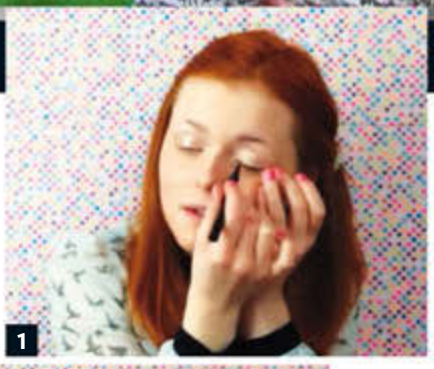
Makeup How-Tos with a Twist

AFTER LOSING HER SIGHT AT 17, THE VLOGGER IS OPENING PEOPLE'S EYES ABOUT BLINDNESS WITH HER INSPIRING YOUTUBE CHANNEL YESTERDAYSWISHES

BY JEFF NELSON

Two years ago the world went dark for Lucy Edwards. Born with incontinentia pigmenti, a rare disorder that can affect one's vision, the 19-year-old had lost sight in one eye at 11; at 17 she lost sight in the other. Forced to adjust to this new way of life, she turned to something she had loved to do when she could see—makeup—and started YesterdaysWishes, a YouTube channel with more than 17,000 subscribers, on which she shares makeup tutorials (like a smoky-eye how-to) and answers questions about the blind community. "It was a way of saying, 'I want to cope. I don't want to just sit in bed eating ice cream anymore,'" says Edwards. "I want to prove that I can be just as normal as when I had my sight."



SHOW & TELL "I'm better at it now," Edwards says of applying eyeliner (1), mascara (2) and lip gloss (3). She's perfected her craft through "trial and error" and help from her sister Alice.

Started as a personal project, Edwards's videos went viral and turned into a platform to help others. "I wanted a place on the Internet that was away from the stigma of disability, because there was no one with a vision impairment or disability online really just doing something that a 'normal' teen would do," she says. "I was just like, 'Why don't I be the person to start helping others?'" Today Edwards—who lives in Birmingham, England, and plans to study law—says she feels less "isolated" and hopes to help bridge the gap between the blind and sighted communities. "I just wanted to show that you can be yourself. Your disabilities don't have to define you," she says. "I feel like I'm not in a world where people don't understand me anymore." ●

My American Dream

GREAT SUCCESS AGAINST ALL ODDS

SKIN CARE & COSMETICS CEO
Vera Moore

DESPITE BEING THE YOUNGEST of seven children born to poor, working-class parents in Queens, Vera Moore, 70, "always had a drive," she says. She threw herself first into acting—landing a decadelong stint as Nurse Linda on Another World—before risking all her savings to launch Vera Moore Cosmetics, whose products are now sold all around the world. "I'm not trying to step out of a box," Moore insists. "I am making my own box."

Strong Foundation

Growing up "very poor" didn't faze Moore, because "we were raised that no matter what we didn't have, we were rich," she says. What her mother, a domestic worker, and her father, a porter, didn't have monetarily, they made up for in moral support: "I remember my mother reading The Little Engine That Could. I heard 'I think I can,' and I based everything on that."

Work in Progress

Moore began a job as a stenographer right out of high school. She vowed to her mom, who cleaned floors on her hands and knees, "The next floor you scrub will be your own." Five years later she bought her parents a house.

Fame and Then Fortune

Called a "singing bird" by an elementary schoolteacher, Moore left her desk job to be an actress in the theater, then television. With fame came the idea that would launch her next career. "They really didn't have makeup for me," she says. "There were brands for people of color, but the quality wasn't great." She and husband Billy Helms mortgaged their home to finance Vera Moore Cosmetics in 1979, creating 30 skin-care and makeup products for women of color.

Heartbreak Hits Home

While Moore struggled to build her business, her parents, her only sister and three of her five brothers died in an 11-year time span. As she cared for one after another, "the business barely made it," she says, "but I think my priorities were right."

Going Global

With her cosmetics now in 56 Duane Reade and Walgreens specialty-makeup "LOOK boutiques" nationwide—as well as China and Puerto Rico—Moore says she will keep expanding. "Entrepreneurship isn't like a cold; you can't catch it," she says. "It's an innate desire."

MODEL LAUREN WASSER

Life After Toxic Shock Syndrome

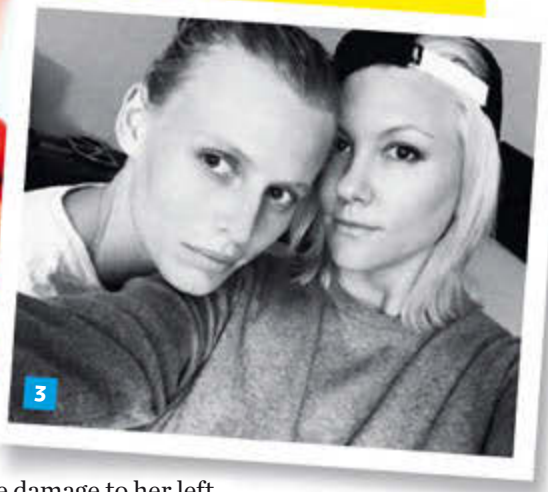
THE 5'11" BEAUTY IS SLOWLY REBUILDING HER CAREER AFTER AN INFECTION CLAIMED HER LEG—AND NEARLY TOOK HER LIFE

BY ANA CALDERONE

When Lauren Wasser started feeling "really, really sick" with flu-like symptoms at a birthday celebration in October 2012, she thought all she needed was a good night's sleep. "My friends were going to an afterparty, and I was like, 'I need to go home,'" she tells People. "All I wanted was my bed." The next thing she remembers is waking up in the hospital. "I had tubes in my mouth and in my throat," says the 27-year-old model, who'd been found unconscious on the floor of her Santa Monica apartment after her concerned mother called the police. She was rushed to the hospital with a 107-degree

"Even when I was hating life, something inside me said keep going," says TSS survivor Wasser (in Los Angeles).

COURTESY JENNIFER ROVERO/CAMRAFACE



A LIFE ON-CAMERA
(1) Wasser posed for her photographer girlfriend Jennifer Rovero in June 2015. (2) A 2004 modeling shot for Z!NK magazine. (3) "Jen has shown me that I am beautiful and still worthy," says Wasser (with Rovero in February).

fever and organ failure: "I just remember being in excruciating pain."

At the Saint John's Health Center, an infectious-disease specialist diagnosed Wasser with toxic shock syndrome, a potentially fatal complication from bacterial infections primarily associated with tampon use (see sidebar). Wasser, who had her period at the time and says she changed her tampon three times that day, within the doctor-recommended range to avoid TSS, suffered a heart attack and developed gangrene, which required a below-the-knee amputation of her right leg and caused severe damage to her left foot. "I thought it was a really bad nightmare," she says. "I just wanted it not to be real."

"I was in a really dark place," says Wasser (with her cocker spaniel at the hospital in 2012).

The 5'11" model—who, before the infection, walked runway shows and posed for catalogs including Nordstrom—spent four months in the hospital and another eight in a wheelchair. "I really wanted to kill myself," she admits, but her mom, Pamela, and younger brother Chris Cook inspired her to stay strong: "I wanted to show Chris that I could be badass and recover." Meanwhile Wasser's photographer girlfriend Jennifer Rovero used her art for a deeply personal brand of phototherapy. "She was so embarrassed [about her prosthesis]," says Rovero. "So I would photograph her, video her and show it to her afterwards. Every time we did that, she got a little bit stronger."

Now Wasser—who vows she'll never use a tampon again—is suing the manufacturer of Kotex Natural Balance, the brand of super-plus tampons she used, seeking damages and fighting for clearer instructions on tampon boxes. (A spokesperson for the manufacturer Kimberly-Clark says the company "does not comment regarding ongoing litigation.") Wasser also hopes to educate girls about the potential risks of tampons. "If people see the pain I've had to go through, maybe they'll be more cautious," she says. Recently signed with a new modeling agency, Vision Los Angeles, she's working to reestablish her career—and to inspire others with disabilities. "I want kids with amputations to know they are still beautiful," she says. "I can turn this into something positive—that's my whole life goal now." ●

What You Need to Know About TSS

According to the most recent study by the Centers for Disease Control, toxic shock syndrome affects around 1 in 100,000 females between the ages of 10 and 39 annually. (Caused by a strain of Staphylococcus aureus, TSS begins with fever, rashes, headache and muscle aches.) Following a string of high-profile incidents in the '80s, tampon boxes now contain warnings about TSS, telling users to change their tampons every four to eight hours, and to use the lowest absorbency possible given their menstrual flow (or to skip using tampons entirely). "You can never get rid of the risk, but you can reduce it as low as possible by using the lowest absorbency," confirms Dr. Patrick M. Schlievert, the chair of the department of microbiology at the University of Iowa's Carver College of Medicine, who has worked on 8,000 TSS cases. "The majority of women are going to be safe using tampons."

THE CHARLESTON CHURCH TRAGEDY AMAZING

GRACE

AFTER THE SHOCKING SHOOTING DEATHS OF 9 CHURCH MEMBERS, GRIEVING LOVED ONES EXPRESS THEIR ANGUISH—AND FORGIVENESS

Patricia Bailey prays at a memorial outside the Emanuel AME Church on June 20. Left: Hundreds gathered at the church on June 21, the first day services resumed after the massacre.

The message came out of the blue, on an ordinary Wednesday in June.

"I know it has been some time since we talked, but please know that whatever happens, all shall be well," began Sharonda Coleman-Singleton in a June 3 voice mail for her college friend of 27 years, Chineta Goodjoin. "All shall be well . . . especially for those who are living their lives according to God's word. All shall be well." Goodjoin, who hadn't talked to her friend in at least five years, listened to the message in the grocery store. "I started crying in the store," she recalls, "because it was a comfort to me. Now I know she was telling me something more."

Two weeks later Coleman-Singleton would be among the nine victims of a deadly shooting rampage at the historic Emanuel African Methodist Episcopal Church in Charleston, S.C. The attack by 21-year-old alleged shooter Dylann Roof, which authorities say was racially motivated, devastated the close-knit congregation and sent shock waves of anguish and outrage across the country. "There is something particularly heartbreaking about death happening in a place in which we seek solace and we seek peace," President Obama said in an emotional press conference the following day. With the massacre reigniting debates about everything from gun control to the presence of the Confederate flag on the South Carolina capitol grounds, those who witnessed the horror firsthand are simply trying to find a path forward. "I've tried to put it into words and can't," says Don Lundy, the Charleston County EMS chief and one of the first responders on the scene. "I've been to bars, hotel rooms, houses. They're all tragic. This was much different. This was supposed to be a sanctuary, a safe place, a house of worship."

Under the leadership of senior pastor Clementa Pinckney, a 41-year-old South Carolina state senator, Emanuel AME was also the kind of place where strangers were always welcome. "He wanted that church to be a beacon of light in the city of Charleston," says Wayne Singleton, the church's music minister. Tragically, one of those strangers was Roof—a troubled high school dropout with a virulently racist agenda who arrived at the church on June 17 around 8 p.m., just as the Bible study group was beginning. "He came in and asked, 'Can I see the minister?'" says Pinckney's cousin Sylvia Stevenson Johnson, "and he walked up and sat next to [Clementa] throughout the whole entire Bible study."

According to authorities, after almost an hour Roof began firing with a .45-cal. handgun at the small group of parishioners, who ranged in age from 5 to 87. Stevenson Johnson, 56, says that survivor Felecia Sanders later told her that she, her 26-year-old son Tywanza and her 5-year-old granddaughter all pretended to be dead as the bullets flew. "The three of them just mingled with the blood because there was blood everywhere," she says. "But then [Tywanza] said, 'I need to check on the pastor.'" As he got up, Tywanza confronted Roof, she says. "He said, 'Why are you doing this? You shouldn't be doing this.' That's when [Roof] said, 'No, you raped our women and you've taken over the country.' [Felecia] watched her

THE ACCUSED
Police say Roof (after his arrest on June 18) acted alone. His next court appearance is scheduled for Oct. 23.

REMEMBERING THE VICTIMS

A 'PROTECTOR,' A LIBRARIAN, A NEW COLLEGE GRAD: THE 9 WHO DIED HAD DIFFERENT CALLINGS BUT WERE ALL DEVOUT AND LOVED

REV. CLEMENTA PINCKNEY, 41

The state senator and senior pastor was married to wife Jennifer and had two children. "He was a protector of that church," says parishioner Myra Singleton.

REV. DEPAYNE MIDDLETON-DOCTOR, 49

A minister who also sang in the choir, she left behind four children. "Our hearts are troubled, but our faith remains steadfast," said relatives.

DANIEL SIMMONS, 74

A retired pastor, Simmons was the only victim who survived the attack; he died at the hospital. "His door was always open," says neighbor Kristen LeVaur.

REV. SHARONDA COLEMAN-SINGLETON, 45

The mom of three—a speech pathologist and minister—"was absolutely funny and supportive," says her friend Goodjoin.

TYWANZA SANDERS, 26

The Allen University grad "had the biggest smile you'd ever see," says his pal Torrence Shaw. "He was versatile; he wrote poems. He had a lot of ambition."

ETHEL LANCE, 70

A sexton for the church, Lance attended Emanuel for most of her life. Says Myra Singleton: "Any time the doors were open, she was there."

MYRA THOMPSON, 59

The former teacher and Bible study leader was "a sweet person," says Myra Singleton. "If you needed her to do something, she never said no."

CYNTHIA HURD, 54

The librarian was a "nerd" as well as "the glue that held everyone together," says her brother Malcolm Graham, a former North Carolina state senator.

SUSIE JACKSON, 87

The longtime church member made her home a family gathering spot. "She could stir a mean pot," her nephew Robert Sanders told The Post and Courier.

son die right in front of her eyes."

A little more than 12 hours later, Roof was captured and charged with nine counts of murder after being spotted 200 miles away in Kings Mountain, N.C. Roof's father and uncle had already alerted authorities to his identity as the suspect seen on surveillance footage at the church. "Words cannot express our shock, grief and disbelief as to what happened that night," his family said in a statement. "We are devastated and saddened."

Roof had two prior arrests, for drug possession and trespassing, but nothing that pointed to the horror that was to come. "His family was just as much in the dark as everyone else," says his friend Dylan Martin, 21. "People who knew him are shocked. He was an average guy, quiet, and stuck to himself but liked to party."

Entering Emanuel AME Church that night, Roof encountered a group of warm strangers who invited him in with open arms. "I'm sure Reverend Pinckney was the first to stand up and extend his hand," says Singleton. A few weeks earlier Pinckney had preached a sermon entitled "A Crazy Family Reunion," in which he spoke of embracing the "black sheep" in families "because when we die, we will all be together, and we should try to help that person," recalls Singleton. "I think about that now, and it kind of ties into everything about how he lost his life."

Amid the pain there have been signs of hope, strength and, remarkably, forgiveness. At Roof's first court appearance—via a video feed—on June 19, Felecia Sanders was among the victims' relatives to address the killer, who could face the death penalty. "Tywanza Sanders is my son," she said. "But Tywanza Sanders was my hero.... May God have mercy on you." And at a June 21 service at the church, where a bullet hole still marked the floor of the community room, worshippers spoke of healing. "We are taught to forgive," says Emanuel member Tara Wright. "That's us. We're not going to let anyone take our faith."

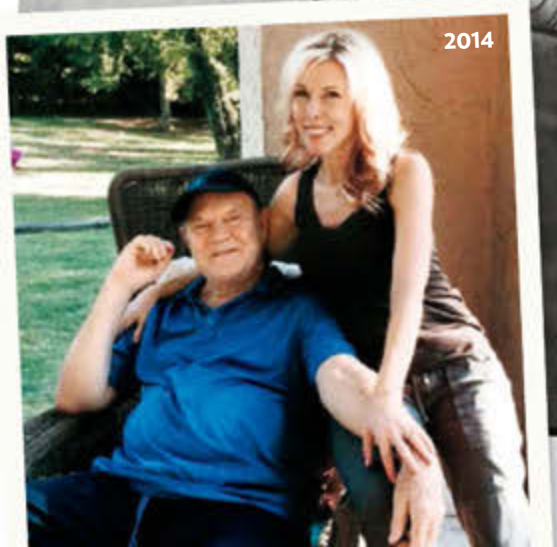
GLEN CAMPBELL

Living with Alzheimer's

AS THE COUNTRY LEGEND'S MEMORY CONTINUES TO FADE, HIS FAMILY OPENS UP ABOUT HIS LIFE NOW AND DEALING WITH THE DEVASTATING DISEASE

BY MELODY CHIU

"I'm not sure Glen would still be on this earth without Kim," says pal Carl Jackson, who introduced the Campbells in 1981.



INSET: COURTESY CAMPBELL FAMILY

During a recent visit with Glen Campbell at the Nashville memory-care facility where he now resides, his wife looked into his eyes and felt what she calls "a deep intimacy and connection"—but just seconds later it was gone. "It just rips your heart out," says Kim Campbell, who has been married to the country singer for nearly 33 years. Four years after he was diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease, the "Rhinestone Cowboy" singer has "few and far between" moments of near clarity, says Kim, 57, and can no longer recognize his loved ones, carry on a conversation or play his beloved guitar. Even so, he is "still Glen Campbell," she says. "He still has the same essence, the same twinkle in his eye and the same chuckle." At his 79th-birthday party in late April, the six-time Grammy winner even managed to deliver the punch line to a favorite joke, cracking up his visitors and himself. "He started laughing and laughing," recalls Kim. "It gives him such joy. He's still an entertainer."

'He still has the same essence, the same twinkle in his eye, the same chuckle'
—KIM CAMPBELL

The singer's slow decline was documented in the Oscar-nominated 2014 film Glen Campbell: I'll Be Me (airing June 28 on CNN and out Sept. 1 on DVD), which followed him and his family as he embarked on his 2011 farewell tour. But his life since then has been far more private. He moved into the memory-care facility more than a year ago after it became too difficult for Kim and the couple's children (Cal, 32, Shannon, 30, and Ashley, 28; Glen has five other adult children among his three ex-wives) to care for him at home. As the disease progressed, he was becoming increasingly "agitated and combative," says Kim. Soon even safety-proofing the house—taking knobs off the doors, hiding dish soap and locking all the kitchen cabinets—and rotating in teams to watch him "around the clock and all night long" couldn't guarantee Glen's well-being. "Things that wouldn't necessarily be harmful, like olive oil, he would pick that up and start chugging it," says Ashley, who moved in with her mom in Nashville to help care for her father.

In February 2014 Kim began looking into respite care, eventually settling on the singer's current community. On his first day there, "he walked in like it was a meet and greet," says Kim, chuckling. "He stood up right in front of everyone, played a couple songs, took a bow, lay down on the sofa and took a nap. He just took right to it."

The country star is still surrounded by music, even if he isn't always able to process it. Ashley comes by the center to entertain her father by singing his favorite tune, "You Are My Sunshine," while Shannon frequently plays guitar to help Glen fall asleep. "I like to play his old songs," he says. And he still knows an off chord when he hears it. "If someone has an instrument and it's out of tune, he'll get as far away as possible!" says Ashley.

Kim remains the primary caregiver for her husband but splits shifts with Brody, a family friend and Glen's personal sitter. "I'm there every single day, and I usually do the afternoon, dinner, and stay with him until he goes to bed," says Kim. "It's not an easy situation," says Carl Jackson, a longtime family friend. "But he's well taken care of, and he's not suffering." On days Glen is combative, the family rallies to get through it. But overall "he's always just in such a state of love and comfort," says Ashley, who adds that her dad's favorite things are "a vanilla bean frappuccino and hugs."

Though two of Glen's older children, Debby, 58, and Travis, 49, unsuccessfully bid for control of their father's affairs earlier this year, the family tries "to keep the focus on Glen," says Kim. Debby visits with her dad and attends family functions with her step-siblings. "It's easy being in his presence," she says. "He's still got his sense of humor." Differences aside, Glen's loved ones are committed to his mission of raising awareness. "He's done so much good for other people who have Alzheimer's," says Kim. "He's proof you can still continue living your life. We just live in the moment." ●

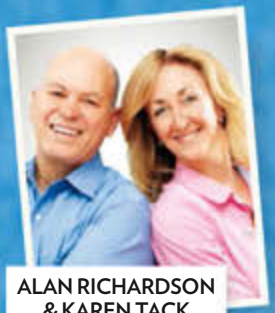
Patriotic Polka-Dot Cake

THE AUTHORS OF CAKE MY DAY! WHIP UP A 'SURPRISE-INSIDE' DESSERT MADE JUST FOR THE HOLIDAY



ALAN RICHARDSON & KAREN TACK

- 1 box (16.25 oz) red velvet cake mix
- 1 cup buttermilk
- 3 large eggs
- ⅓ cup vegetable oil
- 16 plain doughnut holes
- 1 can (16 oz.) vanilla frosting
- 3 tbsp. each red and blue decorating sugar

1. Preheat oven to 350°. Line the bottom of an 8-in. springform pan with parchment paper and spray sides and bottom with vegetable cooking spray. Prepare the cake mix according to the package directions except replacing the water with the buttermilk. 2. Spread ⅓ of the red batter into the bottom of the prepared pan. Arrange 8 doughnut holes on top of the batter. Spread half of the remaining batter on top to cover the doughnuts. Add the 8 remaining doughnuts to the pan pressing them between the doughnut holes in the first layer. Top with the remaining batter, making sure to cover the doughnuts, and smooth. 3. Bake until a toothpick inserted in the center comes out clean, about 45 to 55 minutes. Transfer the cake to a wire rack and cool 10 minutes. Remove the cake from the pan and cool completely. 4. Place the cooled cake, flat side down, on a serving plate. Cover with the vanilla frosting. While the frosting is still wet, sprinkle with the colored sugars, using a 1½-in. round cookie cutter as a stencil, to make alternating red and blue polka dots all over the cake.

Makes: 12 servings
Prep time: 20 minutes, plus cooling
Cook time: 55 minutes

Your 4-Step Guide

"We love easy," says Richardson. "And the technique for making the polka dots couldn't be simpler."

Spread a layer of batter in the pan, and place several doughnut holes on top.

Cover the doughnut holes with a second layer of batter, avoiding any air pockets.

Place a second batch of doughnut holes between the first layer you placed earlier.

Cover with a final layer of batter so no doughnut holes are visible. Then bake.

GOLD PEAK TEA

Spice up your summer with home-brewed taste.

1 18.5 oz. bottle Gold Peak Sweet Tea
1½ cup light brown sugar
2 tbsp. canola oil
3 tbsp. diced jalapeño
2 tbsp. diced garlic
3 cups ketchup
½ cup orange juice
½ cup molasses
1 tbsp. liquid smoke
1 tsp. garlic salt

In a large saucepan, heat the oil and add the garlic, shallots and jalapeño. Sauté for 2 minutes, pour Gold Peak Sweet Tea in the saucepan over medium heat and add brown sugar. Bring to a boil and reduce heat to a simmer. Let mixture simmer until liquid is reduced down to syrup, about 15 minutes. Add the remaining ingredients. Mix well and bring to a low simmer until sauce is combined.

Inside Kendall's Glam Life

WE CAUGHT UP WITH THE FACE OF ESTEE LAUDER WHILE SHE PREPPED FOR THE FRAGRANCE FOUNDATION AWARDS IN NEW YORK CITY

'I LIKE TO EXPERIMENT AND HAVE FUN WITH MY LOOK' –KENDALL JENNER

There's a lot to cover when you're hanging out with one of the biggest models in the world: her first fragrance campaign at 19, her famous family and, of course, her best beauty secrets. Luckily we managed to squeeze it all in.

Are you picky when it comes to your makeup?
I used to be like, "Do whatever you want, I don't care." But recently I've gotten into it. I'm a perfectionist. If someone is doing my eyeliner, it has to be exactly the same on both sides, super-straight. If there's a tiny little bump, it has to be fixed. Our family makeup artists are scared of me sometimes!

Do you ever apply it yourself?
I can't do it myself. That's why I don't wear makeup on an everyday basis, just mascara.

What about doing your own hair? Do you have a go-to style?
Every girl has good hair days and bad ones, but I feel like a ponytail is always going to work. My hair is so straight that it's annoying. When I don't know what to do with it, I just throw it up, and it makes life easy. I also use sea-salt and texture sprays.

Makeup artist Victor Henao used a neutral palette to give Jenner an "elegant, lived-in look" for the awards show (above). The final touch: a spritz of the scent she's the spokesmodel for! Estée Lauder Modern Muse Le Rouge, $82 for 1.7 oz; esteelauder.com

You've often been compared to a young Ali MacGraw…
My mom would hear from her friends that they thought I looked like her. She made me watch Love Story, but I fell asleep halfway through. She's beautiful, she's an icon, so it's really awesome to hear.

What's the best beauty advice you've ever received?
[My younger sister] Kylie and I were both really little, and we were sitting by the pool. I think we were touching each other's faces, and my sisters were like, "Never touch your face! Never! You don't want pimples." They told us to always keep our faces clean.

Do you like to get dressed up?
Yeah, especially when I went to Cannes [for the film festival]. It's fun because you can take it to the next level. I loved the Alaïa skirt I wore [at right, on boat] so much, I didn't want to take it off. I went on a yacht after the red carpet and wore it all night.

What's the toughest thing about modeling?
I'm a people pleaser. I don't like to disappoint or make anyone feel as if they need to worry about me. If I were shaking on the floor, I'd be like, "I swear I'm fine!"

You travel so much. Do you ever get a break?
I live on a plane. I haven't worked out in a month because I've been so busy. I'm really trying to balance work, family and friends. The other day I was supposed to have a fitting, and I moved it back an hour so I could take a nap. If I worked too much, I would not be a happy person.

What I Eat in a Day

'BALANCE AND MODERATION ARE KEY FOR ME,' SAYS THE 5'1" FORMER FIGURE SKATER, 33, WHO CREATED THE LIFESTYLE BLOG ESSENTIALLY TARA

Hydration
Five 16-oz. glasses of water throughout the day

Snack
100-calorie Greek blueberry yogurt
12-oz. glass of diet cola

Snack
½ banana with 1½ tbsp. almond butter

Dinner
at Sushi Roku
Half of the yellowtail sashimi appetizer
1 baked crab hand roll
Handful of edamame
One glass of chardonnay ("Big pour!" says Lipinski)

Dessert
Hershey's Dark Chocolate Bar

Total Calories:
1,472

Early Coffee
Grande Skinny Vanilla Latte from Starbucks

Breakfast (post-workout)
½ cup cantaloupe and honeydew
1 egg and 3 egg whites (free range, cage free) with ¼ cup tomatoes, ¼ cup onions, ¼ cup peppers and ¼ cup chopped spinach
8-oz. cup coffee with almond milk

Snack
Peanut Butter Dark Chocolate Kind bar

The Verdict "Excellent start to the day!" says dietitian Keri Glassman of NutritiousLife.com. "Tara's breakfast has protein and carbs from fruit and lots of vitamins and minerals from veggies. For her second snack, I would prefer she choose a yogurt with more calories and add fresh blueberries to avoid artificial ingredients and excess sugar." As for dinner? "Cheers to a glass of wine!" says Glassman. "She deserves to indulge a bit." But that goes for the main course too: "She needs more fish. This dinner is a bit light!"

One Last Thing

Aziz Ansari

The actor and comedian, 32, just released his first book, Modern Romance

Last bad date
Well, I've been with someone [girlfriend Courtney McBroom] for a couple of years now. But you can still have bad dates with someone you really love. Anytime either one of us was grumpy or tired, it was probably a bad date.

Last thing I misplaced
I lose my sunglasses almost every day. Someone eventually finds them, and they're usually in a very obvious place.

Last romantic thing I did
I've been so busy working, I'm probably slacking on that. My girlfriend is a chef, so I bought her all of these vintage cookbooks when I was in Austin—like 10 of them. I should have spaced them out. Anytime I did something bad, I could have just pulled one out.

Last time I took a selfie
I don't like selfies. I'm antiselfie. I just like talking to people. I feel like the selfie thing always makes me feel weird.

Last fan interaction
These Indian ladies asked if I was the guy from The Big Bang Theory [Kunal Nayyar]. I just said I was. Then I took a selfie with them!
